

Evoked Pharma (EVOK - $3.44)

Positive Gimoti Pharmacokinetic Study Results Reported

EVOK reported yesterday the positive top-line results from the pivotal Gimoti PK study as two doses of the drug demonstrated bioequivalence to the referenced listed drug (RLD) – 10mg Reglan tablet.

- Details. The top-line data have shown that two of the three Gimoti doses tested met the selection criteria. The criteria selected includes a 90% confidence interval for the ratio of area under the curve (AUC) of plasma concentration falling within the range between 80% and 125% bioequivalence to 10mg Reglan tablet. In addition, the maximum observed plasma concentration (C_{max}) for Gimoti was slightly lower than that of the bioequivalence range. EVOK previously has discussed with the FDA about such a possible outcome based on prior Gimoti PK study results and the different route of administration. Dose correlations of AUC and C_{max} increases were observed across all three doses tested. Safety profile is satisfactory as all three Gimoti doses were well-tolerated and without clinically significant AEs. The PK study was an open label, 108-individual and 4-way crossover trial that each healthy volunteer will receive one Reglan Tablet dose and three different doses of Gimoti in a random sequence. EVOK is scheduled to file an NDA via 505(b)(2) with one recommended Gimoti dose in 1Q18.
- Implications. We view the news very positive to EVOK shareholder given EVOK has accomplished a critical clinical milestone. Although EVOK shares dropped ~7% yesterday, we believe investors might have overlooked certain aspects of the clinical results. First, we believe the fact that two doses of Gimoti were within the bioequivalence range could potentially afford the company greater flexibility in evaluating multiple factors before choosing the most optimal dose for potential approval. In addition, one of the major concerns might be the slightly lower C_{max} readout for Gimoti. We noticed that besides administering via an intravenous bolus manner, the C_{max} of drug administered via other means, like oral or nasal, is dependent on the extent, and the rate of drug's absorption and the disposition profile. The FDA's CRF has suggested that two drugs could be considered bioequivalents while they may only be equivalent in the extent of their absorption but not in their rate of absorption. We anticipate the FDA and EVOK to discuss this issue but we do not necessarily consider it a critical hurdle for potential approval.
- Action. We are reiterating our Buy rating and $8 target price based on our peer comparable, cash driven NPV and forward price/sales analyses. Gimoti, in our opinion, could be an important treatment option for modest/severe diabetic gastroparesis, fulfilling an unmet need.

Major Risks

Failures of upcoming clinical studies. Although Gimoti has demonstrated promising efficacy and a satisfactory safety profile from parts of the Phase III study in diabetic gastroparesis; there is no assurance that the upcoming PK clinical study can demonstrate efficacy and safety profiles satisfactory enough along with part of the Phase III study results for gaining clinical approval. Given the clinical study successes are the biggest near-term hurdle to be overcome before Gimoti can be advanced into commercialization, clinical study failure could significantly impair the value of the company's assets and shareholder value. Overall, we view clinical risks of Gimoti are more modest relative to Phase III studies of other biotech companies.

Gimoti may not reach anticipated sales. Assuming Gimoti receives approval and is commercialized, the sales potential could fall short of our forecasts. It is difficult to project accurately the sales potential of Gimoti in gastroparesis given that the market is relatively mature and is dominated by generic products. The assumption is that Gimoti could afford more effective drug availability and bypass the hurdle of slow gastric emptying and vomiting. However, the actual clinical performance from the Phase III study could influence physician acceptance for the drug as well as the company's flexibility to price the drug. The lack of a large size comparative clinical study for Gimoti vs. oral metoclopramide with a superior outcome could also slow down the initial market penetration.

Lack of diversified product portfolio increases risk if Gimoti fails. Since Evoke only has only one product in development and without other prospects on their pipeline, EVOK has very limited options to hedge its risk of product failure. As such, any mishap or failure of Gimoti development could significantly reduce the value of EVOK shareholders.

Additional financing could dilute shareholder value. Regardless of whether or not the company forges additional collaborations with partners to generate non-dilutive revenue to support operations, it is likely that Evoke may need to raise additional cash from investors to fund its operations, especially if the company needs to commercialize Gimoti by themselves. As such, the share value for existing investors could be diluted. Further, if the company cannot raise equity capital at favorable terms, the share value of current shareholders could be further impaired.

Limited trading liquidity limits shareholder options. Daily trading volume and name recognition of EVOK shares are relatively modest. Some investors may be hesitant to own the shares due to illiquid trading volume. This could impose constraints if they want to increase or reduce their positions in a volatile stock market.

Neither the author of this report nor any member of his immediate family or household maintains a position in the securities mentioned in this report.

EQUITY DISCLOSURES

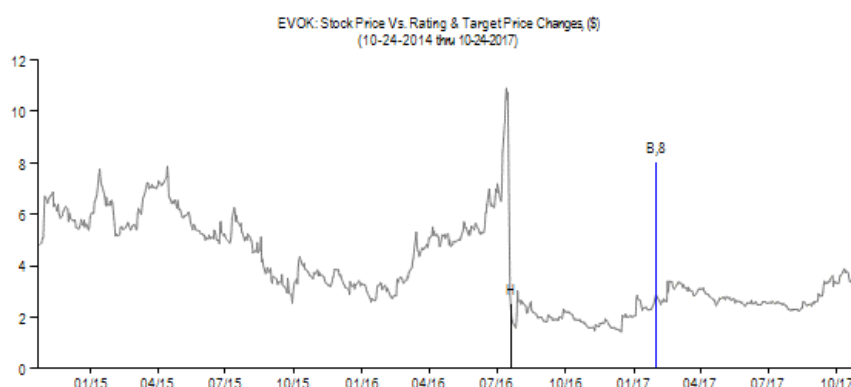

For the purpose of ratings distributions, regulatory rules require the firm to assign ratings to one of three rating categories (i.e. Strong Buy/Buy-Overweight, Hold, or Underweight/Sell) regardless of a firm's own rating categories. Although the firm's ratings of Buy/Overweight, Hold, or Underweight/Sell most closely correspond to Buy, Hold and Sell, respectively, the meanings are not the same because our ratings are determined on a relative basis against the analyst sector universe of stocks. An analyst's coverage sector is comprised of companies that are engaged in similar business or share similar operating characteristics as the subject company. The analysis sector universe is a sub-sector to the analyst's coverage sector, and is compiled to assist the analyst in determining relative valuations of subject companies. The composition of an analyst's sector universe is subject to change over time as various factors, including changing market conditions occur. Accordingly, the rating assigned to a particular stock represents solely the analyst's view of how that stock will perform over the next 12-months relative to the analyst's sector universe.
